LETTERS FROM MARY JANE

Mary Jane is hard at work.
Writing letters, for,
Her uncle, and her aunties, too.
Have gone away to war.

She writes them air-mail letters,
And V-Mail letters, too.
Because she really thinks that:
that's
The timely thing to do

Her thoughts are patriotic,
But strangely true is this:
The only thing she writes alone,
Is X that marks a kiss

Mother writes the envelopes,
And sometimes guides her hand
So Mary Jane can write the words,
Her folks can understand.

She writes in easy phrases,
Of Victory and Peace,
And tells them that she prays each day
May bring the war's release.

She says she's buying war stamps,
And all her friends are, too.
What else is there she'd like to know
That little folks can do.

She tells them funny stories,
Of Porky, and the rest:
Bugs Bunny and Petunia,
And Sniffles, as you've guessed.

Of how they had a play, one day,
And earned some real applause.
As well as money they could give,
To aid the Red Cross cause:

Of Elmer in the army,
Who's quite a soldier, and,
The way he's really working hard,
To keep our banner grand.

"If letters from the home front,
Can cheer our service men,
And also inspire them" says
she,
"I'll keep on writing then"

I don't know if her letters reach
The soldiers in the fight,
But for her trying,
Mary Jane
Is learning how to write!
